8 TIM CONWAY & DON KNOTTS

When Tim Conway and Don Knotts played dim-witted desperadoes in "The Apple Dumpling Gang," they discovered new lives as comedy's latest dynamic duo. Move over Laurel and Hardy, Abbott and Costello, Lemmon and Matthau.

12 ORIGINAL ANIMATION ART IS COLLECTIBLE

There was a time when Walt Disney gave away original art from his studio. Today drawings of Disney cartoon characters, considered fine art, fetch high prices from eager collectors.

14 A BALLET WITH TAILS

What did it take to turn beloved children's stories into "Peter Rabbit And Tales Of Beatrix Potter," the first ballet specifically created for film? Talent, patience, and perseverance.

24 DANGER BAY SWEEPSTAKES

Enter this exciting contest and see if you will win a passport into the world of "Danger Bay."

EDISON TWINS 29 INTERVIEW

Is Andrew Sabiston anything at all like Tom Edison? Is Marnie McPhail like Annie Edison? The stars of "The Edison Twins" reveal what their lives are really like.

Cats of Character

A captivating new collection of fine bone china sculptures...

No pet on earth is quite as popular or intriguing as the cat. Their dispositions are different, but all are adorable. Just like Cats of Character — an original collection of twenty-five hand-painted sculptures in fine bone china...available exclusively from the Danbury Mint at the remarkably low price of $9.50 each!

Crafted in fine bone china and meticulously painted by hand

These cute little creatures are remarkably fine examples of bone china sculpture. From the distinctive body markings and engaging facial features to the lifelike poses, the amount of realism is astonishing. In addition, the facial features of each cat are handpainted. The pink of each nose and the gleam of each eye are added in skillful brush strokes.

Attractively-priced display

You may wish to display your collection proudly in an appropriate setting. A hand-some custom-made display will be made available to you at an attractive price (without obligation to purchase it, of course).

A remarkable value at only $9.50 each!

Imagine, only $9.50 for a sculpture abundantly rich in detail, superbly crafted in fine bone china. This low price is guaranteed for all twenty-five sculptures, even if the price of fine bone china should rise during the duration of the series. This collection is not available anywhere else — it can be obtained only from the Danbury Mint.

You need send no money now. Simply return the reservation application. Your first sculpture will be shipped separately. Thereafter, every other month, you will receive a set of two sculptures which can be paid for in two monthly installments. You may have each installment charged to your VISA or MasterCard.

If you are not pleased with any sculpture, you may return it within thirty days for a prompt replacement or refund. You may discontinue your subscription at any time.

An heirloom collection to be passed from one generation to the next

These sculptures are far more than cute and adorable conversation pieces — they comprise an affordable heirloom collection meant to be enjoyed and treasured...made to be passed down from one generation to the next with love and pride. Do mail your reservation today.

SUBSCRIBERS

SCRAMBLED SIGNALS

We recently purchased a satellite dish system because we are unable to receive cable. We now receive The Disney Channel's signal and we enjoy it very much. But we do have one question. Do you plan to scramble your signal soon?

Art Bunn Montevallo, AL

The Disney Channel does plan to scramble its satellite signal in the near future. Because of this, we are currently at work on setting up a decoding system which will allow satellite dish owners like you to subscribe to The Disney Channel.

MEMORIES OF OZZIE & HARRIET

Early this past summer, I read that "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" was being shown on The Disney Channel. Shortly thereafter, I became a subscriber. What a joy it is to come home from a hectic day of work and settle down to watch a show that is not only tasteful and funny, but also a happy reminder of my childhood.

Ruth N. Biller Florence, SC

"DONALD'S FIRE SURVIVAL PLAN"

I would like to know if and where I can get a copy of your cartoon about fire prevention. I recently saw it on The Disney Channel and think it would be perfect to show to the younger children in our schools during Fire Prevention Week.

Mrs. S. Holbrook Gorham, ME

"Donald's Fire Survival Plan" is available from the Walt Disney Educational Media Company, 500 South Buena Vista St., Burbank, CA 91521. They'd be happy to provide you with the information you've requested as well as a film and video catalog. We also have a toll-free number to call for film rental, 1-800-631-7345. And regarding the purchase of films or videos for use in schools, call 1-800-423-2555.

OOPS! OUR MISTAKE

An error appeared in our November 1985 article "One Magic Christmas: A New Movie Rekindles The Old Magic." In that article Fred Roos was incorrectly mentioned as the producer of the current Disney film "One Magic Christmas." In fact, Peter O'Brian was the producer; Roos was the production executive.

PROGRAM LISTING REQUESTED FRONT AND CENTER

I am disappointed about a change you have made in your magazine. I found the listing of your program titles and their page numbers that used to come in the front pages of the magazine to be very useful. I would appreciate it if you could bring this feature back to the magazine.

Jonathan D. Walz Springfield, IL

Thank you for your interest. We're always looking for comments and feedback about The Disney Channel Magazine. We've received several similar requests and as you can see, the listings have returned to the contents page for your convenience in viewing The Disney Channel.

"DISNEY FAMILY ALBUM"

The first film my parents took me to was "Fantasia"; my first screen heart throb was Annette. Today my young children have full access to anything they want to watch on TV, and they choose The Disney Channel far more than half of the time. I enjoy it, too!

One of my favorite programs is "Disney Family Album." Getting to meet those people who have shaped so much of my world and learning about their thrilling inside experiences in creating a magic world is like discovering Camelot.

I would like to see a Family Album segment devoted to a special group of performers: those people who bring us my children's favorite shows "Dumbo's Circus" and "Welcome to Pooh Corner." How about a story on those hard working actors and actresses?

James Nathan Post Las Cruces, NM

Thank you for your letter. While "The Storymen," our January episode of "Disney Family Allum" (see page 19), concludes this series, we have passed your request along in the event of future installments.

Susan Clark, who plays the romantic interest in this month's "Apple Dumpling Gang" on The Disney Channel, goes behind the camera for her newest project. The actress narrates "Never Say Yes to a Stranger," a soon-to-be-released educational film on the prevention of child abuse, which was made for elementary-school use. Clark and her husband, Alex Karras, are actively concerned with this social problem and work closely with the Richstone Foundation, a California organization assisting abused children and their families.

ntil this summer, "I had one of those faces people recognize but a name they don't,' quipped Brian Dennehy, who portrayed Rosie Waters, the wild bush pilot who first aided and then betrayed Charles Martin Smith in "Never Cry Wolf" (see page 17). With simultaneous appearances as Cobb, the outlaw-turned-corrupt sheriff in Lawrence Kasdan's western "Silverado," and as Walter, the leader of the aliens who rejuvenate a group of oldsters in Ron Howard's smash hit "Cocoon," neither Dennehy's mug nor his name will be easily forgotten. Indeed Dennehy's performance in "Twice in a Lifetime" (with Gene Hackman and Ellen Burstyn) has already received rave reviews from the critics.

hields and Yarnell are together again. Having split up both their act and marriage in 1980, the mime team is once again clowning around on stage (and they're close friends off set). "We realized that what we do together is really magic," says Shields, "so we're starting over again, with lots of dreams and plans."

This month, enjoy (Robert) Shields and (Lorene) Yarnell in "Juggling," (page 19), and watch for their return to The Disney Channel this spring in "The Steadfast Tin Soldier," coming up on "Enchanted Musical Playhouse."

Apparently marriage is not in their future, but touring is. They'll start by taking their act on the road in India.

Susan Clark turns her talents to the serious subject of child abuse

Brian Dennehy (right) leaves the Arctic wilds of "Never Cry Wolf" to co-star with Gene Hackman in "Twice in a Lifetime"

Cybill Shepherd topples the critics who claimed she couldn't act

Bilbixby, who finds himself stuck with three frisky kids in "The Apple Dumpling Gang" on the Channel this month, starts the New Year as star of "The Last Resort," a TV pilot for an hour-length series set in Hawaii. Bixby plays a newspaper columnist in the contemporary drama, written by Don Reo for airing on ABC. It's the first project to come from a development deal Bixby recently made with a major studio utilizing his services as an actor and director.

Acting on the live stage is not Love's Labour's Lost for Jenny Agutter, the star of the made-for-The Disney Channel drama "Amy" (see page 16). Since the filming of Amy" in 1983, Jenny has been bouncing on the boards in London, having played Rosaline in Shakespeare's "Love's Labour's Lost" for the prestigious BBC. While American audiences got to see Agutter this past year in a guest starring role on "Magnum, P.I.," the London theater scene still exerts a magnetic attraction for Agutter -she's currently appearing in "Breaking the Silence" at London's famed Mermaid Theatre. Shakespeare may have said "All the world's a stage," but London just happens to be the current capital of live theater.

t's not that Cybill Shepherd, the stunning star of "Daisy Miller" (see page 16), is knocking her good looks, but she can remember a time in Hollywood when they were held against her. After a brisk start, Shepherd's career flagged in the late '70s. In fact, the verdict went out that though the former model was striking, she just couldn't act. Today Cybill Shepherd's sitting pretty with the hit of her ABC series "Moonlighting"—and is amused at the startled reaction from her former critics.

"You get pigeonholed by the way you look," she explained recently. "It's a funny thing: doors open, but they also close. Like this whole thing about people being surprised I can act. I was always getting better as an actress; I always knew that I was good."

After enjoying Henry Calvin and Gene Sheldon in "Babes in Toyland," I was wondering if these fine comic actors are still alive.—L.A., San Antonio, TX

No, both Calvin and Sheldon have died, Calvin at age 57 in 1975 and Sheldon at 75 in 1982. Besides "Babes in Toyland," they lent their comedic talents to Disney's "Toby Tyler" and to "Zorro."

Gene Sheldon and Henry Calvin

I saw a newspaper account of a Disney collectors' convention in Anaheim last summer. How can I find out about this club?—P.G., San Diego, CA

Actually there were two gatherings of Disney collectors in Anaheim last summer. The National Fantasy Fan Club (P.O. Box 19212, Irvine, CA 92713) held its annual meeting in July and the Mouse Club (2056 Cirone Way, San Jose, CA 95124) held its meeting in August. Neither of these clubs are officially sponsored by Disney, but they provide a way for Disney collectors to meet and acquire new items for their collections. Each group publishes a periodic newsletter.

In a Trivial Pursuit game there is a question, "Does Donald Duck have teeth?" The answer was "No." I have seen Donald with teeth in many cartoons. What is the correct answer?—A.H., Cleveland, TN

You have indeed caught an error. When necessary for the story, as when they wanted him to look fierce, the animators would give Donald teeth. Who were Walt Disney's "nine old men"?—M.L., Derby, KS

After Franklin D. Roosevelt spoke of his "nine old men" on the Supreme Court, Walt remarked that he had his own "nine old men," referring to his key animators at the time. They were Les Clark, Marc Davis, Ollie Johnston, Milt Kahl, Ward Kimball, Eric Larson, John Lounsbery, Woolie Reitherman, and Frank Thomas.

What can you tell me about a Mickey Mouse spoon which I have from my childhood? It has "Wm. Rogers Mfg. Co." on the back.— E.B., Portland, OR

The spoon you have is probably one of the most common items of Disney memorabilia from the 1930s. It was available as a premium from Post cereals in 1937. You sent in 10¢ and a box top, and you would get a spoon. It is amazing how many families still have one of these Mickey Mouse spoons in the back of their silverware drawers.

DISNEY CHANNEL TRIVIA

- The Colony Theater where Mickey Mouse premiered in "Steamboat Willie" on November 18, 1928, was later renamed the Broadway Theater, and the Disney classic, "Fantasia," had its premiere there 12 years later.
- Besides this month's "Amy," how many Disney features can you think of with one-word titles? (Hint: There are 21 of them)*

- While planning the sets for "The Apple Dumpling Gang" at the Disney Studio, the set designers decided that three copies of the bank had to be built. One was indoors on a sound stage (featuring exterior and interior sets), and two matching exteriors were built outdoors on the backlot, one of them roofless and with burned beams exposed, showing the aftermath of an explosion.
- Actress Nanette Fabray found it easy to relate to the young boys and girls recruited from the California School for the Deaf in Riverside to act in "Amy." Miss Fabray herself suffered from a hearing loss that stemmed from a hereditary disease, and only after several operations spanning two decades was her hearing restored.

TIM CONWAY & DON KNOTTS:

THE ODD (BALL) COUPLE OF COMEDY

im Conway and Don Knotts lead double lives. Each is a comedian in his own right, but occasionally they get together for a co-starring movie. When that happens audiences are in for a rare kind of nonsense that hasn't been seen since the likes of Laurel and Hardy or Abbott and Costello. As a team, Conway and Knotts specialize in playing blockheads.

line enlivens "The Apple Dumpling Gang," premiering this month on The Disney Channel (see page 16). In this way-out Western, the pair portrayed dim-witted desperadoes with such success that they were called on to do a sequel, "The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again," which airs on the Channel in February. They have since partnered in "The Prize Fighter" and "The Private Eves."

Although they work the same territory, Conway and Knotts approach comedy differently. Tim is fast and shoots from the hip. Don likes to sneak up on a gag. This pattern was set early in their careers, while they were small towners still looking to make good in the big city.

Tim hails from Willoughby, Ohio, and attended Bowling Green State University, majoring in liberal arts and minoring in home economics. He earned money by selling egg-salad sandwiches to coeds in the girls' dorm, and retrieving golf balls from the city reservoir. "The fifth hole was over the reservoir and there was a $500 fine for swimming in it," Conway says. "I got an aqualung and 12 onion bags, and came up with 1,300 balls, which I sold to the driving range." To help make ends meet he joined a fraternity, then elected himself chef so he could be near the food. He also joined a pizza club and dined on pizza every week for several months. "Nice thing about those dinners," he notes. "After one of them, you could always get a seat on the bus."

Along the way, Conway was becoming a comedy writer. He had shown a talent for writing in high school, and while in college he stitched together a comedy act fabricated from a combination of his own and some admittedly stolen material. It barely launched his career but he struggled upward (the only direction he could go) until he became co-host of a daily TV show in Cleveland. There he began creating characters to substitute for scheduled guests who failed to appear. "I invented a slew of them, which says something about our show," Conway adds.

But some of those improvisations grew into sketches, and they caught the eye of Steve Allen, whose television shows spotlighted new faces and fresh talent from all parts of the country. As a result, Conway went to Hollywood, did three shows for Allen (who would also lure Don Knotts to the Coast), and eventually landed the part of Ensign Parker in "McHale's Navy." He went on to do two movies derived from that series, and by the time the Disney Studio signed him for "The World's Greatest Athlete" in 1972, Tim Conway was a popular comedy star.

Don Knotts comes from Morgantown, West Virginia. His mother, a great moviegoer, used to take her little son with her to the local picture shows. "I spent the first seven years of my life in the dark, looking at those moving shadows on the silver screen," he says. "By the time I was eight, I knew I wanted to be an actor. A comedian I didn't know about yet, but an actor I did." At the same time, he had become a radio fan whose favorites were Edgar Bergen, Joe Penner, Jack Benny and Fred Allen. "Thanks to radio," Knotts says, "I knew something about timing before I was out of grade school."

Using Edgar Bergen as his inspiration and source of supply (he borrowed Bergen's gags and part of his act), Knotts set up as an adolescent ventriloquist. He was a novel performer, in that his voice kept changing while he was throwing it. He played to civic groups throughout high school, and after graduation felt confident enough to tackle New York. "But the big time wasn't ready for me," Knotts says, "so I went home and joined the army."

After his tour of duty in an armed forces revue where his audience, composed of GIs, couldn't walk out, Knotts borrowed a hundred dollars and challenged New York again. This time he landed a spot in Lanny Ross's radio show and soon was on his way to comedic eminence. He starred with Andy Griffith in both the stage and screen version of "No Time for Sergeants," became a regular on Garry Moore's day-time TV show, and was spotted there by Steve Allen, who persuaded him to perform on "The Steve Allen Show" and live permanently in Hollywood.

A 125-pounder whose face in repose is chopfallen, Knotts makes an ideal pipsqueak. He based one of his early comedy characterizations on a nervous after-dinner speaker he observed in Morgantown. He has played wimps with names like Limpet, Chicken, Figg, and Peacock. He made his Disney debut as Don La Knotts, a body builder, in "The Mouse Factory" teleseries.

Tim Conway, on the other hand, takes a scattershot approach to comedy. Nothing is too audacious for him. He has played dentists, butlers, bullfighters, drunks, dance-hall floozies, you name it. "I am a gambler in life and work," he says. "I like to gamble with comedy, to take that one step beyond, where people might even say, 'He's gone too far, that wasn't funny."

However he gambled in "The Apple Dumpling Gang," Conway—and his asthenic sidekick Knotts-came out winners. The movie was a box office bonanza and established them as an uproarious comedy team. The studio promptly jumped on the bandwagon and hustled them into "The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again."

"But neither Don nor I wanted to get locked into a place where we'd lose our identity as individual performers," Conway says. So they continued to make pictures on their own until "The Prize Fighter," a knockout comedy coauthored by Conway, threw them together again.

"That was my third original screenplay, and the idea for it was very simple," Conway says. "I would be an exboxer and Don would train me to enter a world championship match which, unknown to me, was fixed. Knowing Don as well as I do, I only had to put him and myself in progressively embarrassing situations. I wrote the script in a day and a half. As a matter of fact I've written each of my screenplays, a total of 10 so far, in less than two days...and they probably show it."

A few months after completing "The Prize Fighter" and finding himself with a couple of hours to spare, Conway sat down and dashed off "The Private Eyes." This time he and Knotts played blundering detectives from Scotland Yard who, as the critics mentioned, stumble into a tightly-written murder mystery worthy of Agatha Christie. On that story the perceptive screenwriter (Tim Conway) and bumbling comedian (Tim Conway) were in perfect sync.

Conway has plans for more movies with Knotts. Meanwhile, both are busy on other projects. Don tours in summer theater and is talking about a TV comedy with his longtime friend Andy Griffith. (Knotts won five Emmy Awards for his portrayal of Barney Fife, the jittery deputy sheriff on "The Andy Griffith Show.") Conway's new movie, "The Long Shot," a racetrack romp for which he wrote the screenplay, opens this month. He also is plugging his first book, "You Slept Where Last Night?" It's a hilarious manual of advice to folks who may have celebrated a night on the town too enthusiastically. So thorough was his research that Conway is now recognized by doctors as the only person to have donated his living body to science.

"Wrote that one in an hour and a half," he says. *

'NEITHER DON NOR I WANTED TO GET LOCKED INTO A PLACE WHERE WE'D LOSE OUR IDENTITY AS INDIVIDUAL PERFORMERS" CONWAY SAYS.

Original Animation Respectable Collectible

alt Disney used to give away original art from his studio. Today those drawings of Mickey Mouse, Snow White, Bambi, and other animated cartoon characters can be worth hundreds and even thousands of dollars, and their value is increasing.

So is the artwork from almost any animated movie, whether produced by Disney or not. With more and more collectors getting interested, there is a growing market for the wonderful likes of Betty Boop, Popeye and Olive Oyl, Felix the Cat, Bugs Bunny, Woody Woodpecker, the Pink Panther and the Flintstones.

Most animation art is still reasonably affordable. All kinds of paintings, drawings, and "cels" can be bought for less than $50. But regardless of price, any artwork created for an animated film is, by its very nature, unique and collectible.

Cartoon movies go back to 1900, and the best artists of their time have tried their hand at them. One of the first was Winsor McCay, who created "Little Critics laughed when art dealer Charles Sessler took down "Whistler's Mother" and hung a portrait of Dopey in its place. Sessler's first buyer, however, was New York's Museum of Modern Art.

Nemo in Slumberland," "Dreams of a Rarebit Fiend," and other great newspaper comic strips. McCay spent four years making 4,000 drawings for an animated film version of Little Nemo, which he presented in 1911. He made 10,000 drawings, each one inked on rice paper and mounted on a cardboard, for "Gertie the Trained Dinosaur."

Rube Goldberg, Milt Gross, George McManus, Sidney Smith, and other famous newspaper cartoonists followed McCay into animation, but they lacked the dedication or interest to stay with it. Mutt and Jeff, Andy Gump, Happy Hooligan, Krazy Kat, Jiggs and Maggie, the Katzenjammer Kids, and Boob McNutt jumped out of the inkwell onto the screen by means of other animators. And at one time or another over the years, Walt "Pogo" Kelly, Virgil "Big George" Partch, Hank "Dennis the Menace" Ketchum, cartoonist Sam Cobean, and even the surrealist painter Salvador Dali had a go at animation.

A cel, short for celluloid, is a finished piece of animation art, ready to be photographed over a background as a single frame in an animated film. Original animation art began attracting serious collectors in 1938, when cels from Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" were offered for sale by the dignified Courvoisier Galleries in San Francisco.

"Until then," says veteran Disney artist Ward Kimball, "Walt gave them away. A Disney Studio business card didn't mean anything, but people would look at a cel."

Courvoisier sold Snow White cels for $5 to $50, and hoped to get the price up to $75. They were issued with stickers of authenticity on the back, and a few were autographed by Disney. Today those Courvoisier cels, even without Walt's signature, bring upward of $600.

When Disneyland opened in 1955, cels from the studio's recent cartoons were tagged at $1.47, with a souvenir mailing envelope thrown in. Original Disney cels are currently available at starting prices of around $200.

Original animation art began attracting serious collectors in 1938.

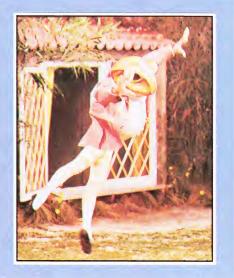

"Cels are now considered fine art," says Kimball. "Examples of animation art hang in major galleries and museums throughout the world."

The leap from kitsch to fine art was accomplished in 1938 with an exhibition of Disney cels and drawings at the Charles Sessler Galleries in Philadelphia. Art critics smiled as Sessler took down 'Whistler's Mother' and in its place hung a portrait of Dopey. But Sessler had the last laugh. Over 200 pieces sold within the first few hours, and among the purchasers were the Museum of Modern Art and the Metropolitan Museum of New York.

Dance scenes: The love duet of Pigling Bland and Black Berkshire touches the hearts of assembled family and friends. Near the pond, Mr. Jeremy Fisher performs highflying leaps on his way to catch minnows for supper. In the farmyard, porcine dancers on tiny feet. Behinď themstretches the beautiful English countryside.

Ingenuity and hard work went into making "Peter Rabbit And Tales Of Beatrix Potter" the first ballet created for film. Out of the effort came charm and beauty.

igling Bland and Black Berkshire Pig dancing a pas de deux? Sounds silly, but it's not. It's a touching ballet duet — you'll love them and they dance it beautifully. Not surprising, though, since underneath all of the costuming, they are dancers from London's Royal Ballet. Their dance is part of "Peter Rabbit And Tales Of Beatrix Potter." It's not a film of a staged ballet, but rather a movie with a ballet script.

Unlike ballet films of the past in which we see close-ups of dancers pirouetting within the confines of a wooden stage set, the ballet enactment of Beatrix Potter's animal stories has a visual space as big as all outdoors. Some scenes were actually filmed outdoors — in the lush green English countryside of the Lake District, where Beatrix Potter lived and created her tiny but greatly loved books.

The film's opening sequences alternate between the gloom of the Victorian household that confined the young Beatrix Potter (played by Erin Geraghty) and the expansive countryside that gave her escape. We see the studious, nature-loving Miss Potter, in her dark lonely room, creating on paper with painstaking detail the famous animal illustrations (which can be seen today in London's Tate Gallery). Filmed darkness then gives way to light and her imaginary friends - Peter Rabbit (who watches the goings-on from behind ferns), Mrs. Tiggy-Winkle, the hedgehog, and others, as they inhabited her mind, brightening an otherwise dreary life.

The animals' personalities come not from her drawings alone, but from the Tales she wrote to accompany the illustrations. She created a whole world for herself and her readers, whom she insisted were children. "My books were made small to fit children's hands, not to impress grown-ups," she wrote. True, several generations of children have fondled the little books until tattered, but despite Miss Potter's intentions, the books are loved by grown-ups, including such world-class talent as became committed to filming the ballet.

Among the gifted people hooked by the project was Rumer Godden, prolific novelist, children's author, playwright and poet. She wrote a book, "The Tale of the Tales," which describes the film's creation, from early pencil drawings to feature-length movie. What follows is a retelling of her story.

It all began in 1968 in Rome on the set of another film—the famous Zeffirelli production of "Romeo and Juliet." Richard Goodwin, who was associate-producer, and Christine Edzard, who had come from Paris to work with Lila di Nobili on the sets, agreed that when "Romeo and Juliet" was finished, they wanted to work on a project together.

Within a year, Richard Goodwin and Christine Edzard were back in London. Theirs was a love relationship as well as a professional one, and they soon married, and moved into a new house. Christine immediately took over the drawing-room with her large architect's table, and began doing costume and set drawings for "Peter Rabbit And Tales Of Beatrix Potter."

Ordinarily a film starts off with a script, but in this case, since there's not a word spoken, not even in narration, Christine's sketches were the script. Eventually she had 600 drawings piled all over the room, and this was merely a prelude to the industry that would fill the house with worktables, clay, animal costumes, masks, and a rack of tails.

The first important outcome of Christine's drawings was to inspire Frederick Ashton to become the ballet's choreographer. As a bonus, he (at sixty-five) donned tiny black button boots and bustling skirts to dance the role of Mrs. Tiggy-Winkle.

Other talent followed. John Lanchbery composed the score and conducted the Royal Opera House Orchestra, and Russian designer Rotislav Dobujinsky labored over the masks, probably the most distinctive work of the film. For Christine Edzard, "If the masks had not been right, the whole project would have failed." Like Miss Potter's animals, the masks had to be true to nature, and each one a distinct personality, besides.

Doboujinsky's masks are, indeed, accurate renderings of the author's characters. When designing the mask for mouse Hunca Munca, for example, Doboujinsky used the Potter drawings of her, but also kept a real mouse in a cage. He tried 14 times over the better part of a winter before he got Hunca Munca's mask the way he wanted it.

Doboujinsky brought in hair-dressers from Vidal Sassoon to trim the squirrels' fur to just the right shape. Each animal required different size eyes. For the pigs' little eyes, they used marbles.

He was a perfectionist when it came to "dressing" the masks, too. He didn't like the way artificial fur worked for the mice, so he used real hair to cover their faces. Using a generator, moved into a basement room at Goodwin Place, he'd place a mask, covered with glue, on a magnetic rod, then drop the hair from above when the current was turned on. As hairs have positive as well as negative ends, they all dropped upright onto the surface of glue.

For the squirrels' bodies artificial fur worked fine, but to make sure it looked natural, Doboujinsky brought in hairdressers from Vidal Sassoon to trim it to just the right shape. Then there were ears to be lined and attached, whiskers placed, and eyes shaped and positioned.

Doboujinsky said at the time: "About a quarter of one's experience, however long, can be used on any new project." His theory, which he applied to the whole mask-making endeavor, was perhaps especially true for making the eyes. In the end, after much experimentation, he and Christine made them of gelatine from the color slides used in front of stage lights to alter their tints. They used blue and yellow slides for the cat. For the mice they warmed chocolate brown gelatine, and when soft, molded it around ping-pong balls. Each animal required different size eyes. For the pigs' little eyes, they used marbles.

Christine fussed over the costumes in the same perfectionistic way. She bought authentic Victorian prints, but thought the colors were too bright, so she put them through several bleachings in the bath tub. Her husband complained: "The dye came off and you never knew, if you had a bath afterwards, if you would come out blue or yellow."

The masks and costumes are not a cover-up to personality, however, and Ashton cast dancers whose styles and temperaments suited the characters. He gives this example: "Mrs. Tittlemouse was a terrible tidy and particular little mouse and like many over-particular people, she had a sharp little temper. She had to be small, neat, exact in her dancing, her hands most expressive."

Miss Godden writes of Ashton's own portrayal of hedgehog Mrs. Tiggy-Winkle: "The mask did not transform him; he transformed the mask."

The costuming and dancing are mutually enhancing, shall we say, but not always easily so. "Christine was faced with a double difficulty," Miss Godden writes: "The animals had to be animals; the dancers dance." Take Pigling Bland, for example: his breeches are padded so that his legs are far apart like any other pig. Yet this porcine Nureyev loses nothing in grace and romantic gesture. And he's dancing "sur pointe," unusual for men, let alone pigs.

Pigling's partner, Black Berkshire, complained: "The pig heads and Pigling's padding prevented us getting close. We had to extend our arms so far it put us off balance." We'd never guess.

The ballet's finale begins with Pigling waltzing with Black Berkshire, as Peter Rabbit and the rest look on and cheer. The English countryside stretches behind them. Then they all join in dance. The animals are animals and the dancers dance.

INTERVIEW WITH THE EDISON TWINS

Tom & Annie & Andrew & Marnie

The mystery-solving, science-loving Edison Twins aren't twins at all, of course. Andrew Sabiston plays the role of Tom, and Marnie McPhail plays his twin sister, Annie. Is Andrew like Tom? Is Marnie like Annie? Do Andrew and Marnie get along as easily as Tom and Annie? Who would Marnie rather spend time with, Andrew or Tom? Their answers are revealing.

"Annie's calm and down to earth. She probably eats properly and does her homework as soon as she comes home from school," Marnie observes, as though talking about a friend. "I like her, but she's totally different from me. I never stop talking, and I love to eat junk food.

"As a kid I was really hyper, dancing around the house, rough housing with my younger brothers (Marnie is now 19; her brothers Noah and Joseph are 13 and 11), and making a lot of noise. I was always putting on plays my Mom had to watch. I did my homework, and I got pretty good grades, but I'd save it until the last minute."

At school Marnie didn't like science. She passed, but never got interested in it. "Now that I'm using it to solve crimes, I like it better," she adds, laughing.

Although Annie likes science more than Marnie does, it's Tom's character who's really serious about it, Marnie explains. "Annie's more interested in boys and playing ball. She doesn't always want to hang around the Edison workshop."

"I never stop talking, and I love to eat junk food," Marnie says.

Her TV twin, Tom, will stay in the workshop until he finds the solution. "He's stubborn and impatient," according to the young actor who plays him, Andrew Sabiston, 20. "We're alike in that way." But it's a small likeness, and in every other way Andrew and Tom are different.

Marnie & Andrew— The Edison Twins

Although Andrew won the biology prize in high school, he hated physics and chemistry. He's an actor who wants to write and direct as well. He won't get stuck in the science workshop, that's for sure.

"Tom thinks very logically," Andrew says. "I find it interesting to be able to think that logically. I'm not logical. If I get into an argument with someone, I can never find my way out of it."

Tom is shy and doesn't have much of a sense of humor. "I find Monty Python very funny," Andrew comments. "I don't think Tom would."

Andrew likes Tom, though. "I don't think he'd be boring on a date. He'd be nervous and that would be funny, but I like him very much, so I don't see why anyone else shouldn't."

Judging from the fan mail, girls in the TV audience like Tom just fine. Marnie gets lots of letters asking about Andrew. "It's kind of like going to the big sister and telling her she likes her brother," Marnie says.

"Andrew and I are alike in a lot of ways," Marnie continues. "We like the same people, and the same kinds of music." Andrew's favorite band is U2; Marnie likes The Eurythmics and The Cars. In real life Andrew has a girlfriend and Marnie has a boyfriend. The four of them often meet at a sports complex near Marnie's apartment, or get together for dinner and to watch TV.

"I find Monty Python very funny," Andrew comments. "I don't think Tom would."

Differences? "Andrew will eat something like squid," Marnie says. "I think it's gross."

Andrew describes the difference between them in terms of movies. "She sees more commercial movies," he says of Marnie. "I see them, too, but I'll see more European stuff." Andrew's favorite actor is Peter O'Toole.

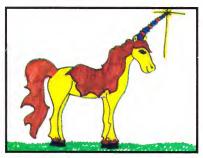

Offscreen Andrew looks more like Tom than Marnie does Annie. Marnie likes her hair up and may wear high heels. Sometimes when they're together in public, people spot Andrew and don't even realize that the person with him is Marnie. "She doesn't do it to hide herself," Andrew says, "and it doesn't bother her not to be recognized. I always say, 'And here's Annie.' There's no jealousy between us."

They both agree that the thing they like most about Tom and Annie is their onscreen relationship. They like the way the twins work closely together, bounce ideas off each other, and cooperate to solve problems. "Marnie and I are close, too," Andrew says. "We hang out together, but we don't go through things as a team the way Tom and Annie do."

Much as Marnie likes how well Tom and Annie get along, given a choice between spending time with Tom or Andrew, she'd choose Andrew because he's not so serious. And Andrew would choose Marnie for the same reason. In Andrew's words: "When the camera stops rolling, we're laughing."

Roo is played by a puppet, and sometimes Roo is played by a very small, real, live person.

CLOUDS

If I had a spoon as tall as the sky,
I'd catch all the clouds that go zig-zagging by.
I'd bring them down below and share them with Kathryn, Susan, Terry and Moe.
Then I would give all the clouds to my cook to see if they tasted as good as they look!

WHEN YOU MAKE FRIENDS WITH A PUPPY

© Ralston Purina Company, 1984

To make friends with a puppy, you've got to work at it a while.

Maybe all of three seconds. Just pet a puppy, talk to him a little, and suddenly you've got a friend that will follow you and love you. As long as he lives.

Pets add a great deal to our lives. And Purina® wants to add as much to theirs. That's why for more than half-a-century we've searched for ways to help pets live longer, healthier lives. And that's why Purina pet foods contain all the nutrition your pet needs.

The next time you look for pet food, look for the Checkerboard.

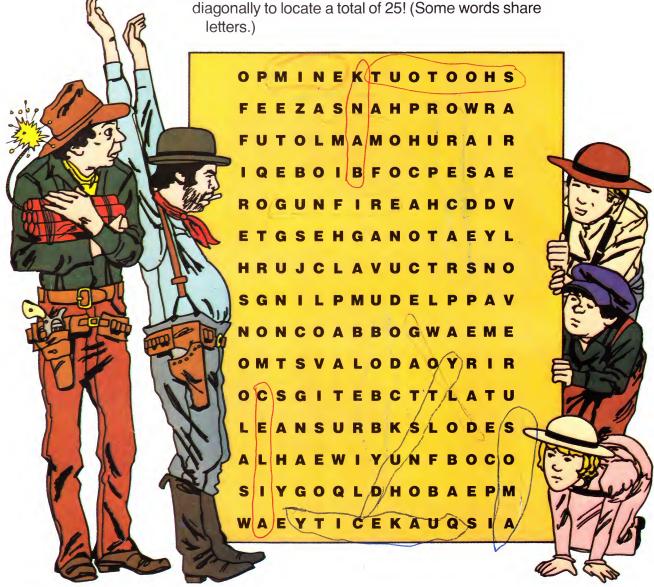

And help your pet live a longer, healthier life.
